TYPES OF PROCESSED DATA

Browsing data

The data systems and software procedures in place for the running of this website acquire, during their normal operation, certain personal data, the transmission of which is implicit in the use of internet communication protocol use.

This information is not collected to be associated to any identified interested parties, but rather, due to its nature, because it could, after processing and associating with data managed by third parties, enable identifying the users.

In this category of data we find IP addresses or dominion names of the PCs used by users which connect to the site, the URI notation addresses of the requested sources, the request times, the method used to subject the request to the server, the size of the file that is obtained in reply, the numeric code indicating the status of the reply given by the server (successful, error, etc) and other parameters relative to the operating system and to the users' informatics environment. This data is used for the sole purpose of obtaining anonymous statistical information on site usage and to control its proper functioning and are deleted immediately after processing has taken place. The data could be used to ascertain responsibility in case of any hypothetical data crimes at the expense of the site: save for this possibility, as things stand, the web contact data does not linger for more than six months.

Data which is willingly provided by users

The optional, explicit or voluntary sending of email to the addresses shown on this site means that the senders' addresses are then acquired by the site to reply to the requests, as are acquired other personal data included in the message.

Specific synthesis statements will be progressively posted on those web pages which have been earmarked for particular on-demand services.

Cookies

No user personal data is acquired by the site to this end. Cookies are not employed to transmit personal information, nor are any so-called persistent cookies of any type used, meaning user tracking systems.

The use of so-called session cookies (which are not memorised persistently on the users' PCs and disappear once the browser is exited) is strictly limited to the transmission of session identifiers (which consist of casual numbers generated by the server) needed to enable safe and efficient browsing of the site.

The so-called session cookies used in this site preclude the use of other data potentially prejudicial data processing techniques for the browsing privacy of users and do not allow any personal identifying user data to be acquired.

Log files and their storing

Log files will be traced for purposes of security, requiring the registering and maintenance of log files and their accessibility by the judiciary police if it so requests.

To this end, access log files are stored for a time frame not exceeding 6 to 12 months.

Any inspections of the accesses will be carried out in gradual manner and in complete respect of the law, particularly of the principles of necessity and proportionality.

OPTIONAL NATURE OF DATA PROVIDE

Apart from what is specified for browsing data, users are free to provide the personal data appearing on the request forms or indicated in contacts to request registration in the site database or for the sending of information material or other types of communication.

If not provided then requests may be rejected. For purposes of thoroughness please remember that (not subject to the ordinary management of this site) the Authority may request news and information pursuant to art. 157 of Legs. Dec. n. 196/2003, to check on the processing of personal data. In such cases a reply is obligatory and backed by an administrative fine.
